HOW UBER EDUCATION IS SAVING SCHOOLS MONEY

“As a Headteacher in a secondary school I struggled each year to control the supply budget. Agencies continued to increase their margin and supply teachers were costing as much as 40% more than they were earning. In terms of cost, this continued to increase at a time I was trying to save money.”

Adrian - Headteacher

Agencies have increased their fees to such an extent that supply teachers receive only a fraction of the money paid out by schools. Teachers are seeing a cut in their earnings meaning the best ones are leaving the profession.

Uber Education does two things:

- Enables schools to access supply teachers directly cutting out the agency fee and saving money. Schools have visibility over who they are booking and can share feedback on their effectiveness with other schools.

Uber Education is helping schools source good teachers whilst saving money.

- Teachers working through Uber Education earn more money as a result of no agency. This ensures the best teachers who enjoy the flexibility of supply work can set their own fees or negotiate these with schools.

Uber Education ensures good teachers are paid a fair rate reflective of their talents and not exploited by supply agencies.

HOW IT WORKS?

"I found using Uber Education very straightforward. As a Deputy Principal involved in recruitment of staff and responding to staff absence my role was to source reliable supply staff, whilst working to a budget within the school. Uber Education enabled me to develop a relationship with the most effective supply teachers and book them directly, without having to go through an agency 'handler'.

The Uber Education supply teachers quickly became familiar with our school policies, got to know our staff and felt part of the school family. They did all this whilst retaining the flexibility of supply teaching and receiving approximately 20% higher rate than they were paid in the agency. Despite this, the school still saved money. In fact in using Uber Education I have saved the school over 20% in supply costs."

Helen - Deputy Principal
